

Marketplace Excellence

Connie Salios has found success in the marketplace for the past 26 years with his merchandising company, KaltySalios. When The Master's Program introduced the idea of the Intellectual Fitness Realm, something sparked for him in relation to his future calling.

As his time in the program continued, Connie discovered that he held the experience, marketplace skills, and spiritual foundation that could benefit others in the educational setting.

After exiting The Master's Program, Connie connected with Dan Maltby, director of the Organizational Leadership graduate program at Biola University. Because the idea of teaching as part of his future calling continued to grow, Connie decided to complete Biola's MA program. He was able to use his discretionary time to build the credentials needed to pursue this future calling.

Influencing Future Leaders

Upon earning his graduate degree, Connie was immediately offered an adjunct teaching position with Biola. He currently teaches courses in the Organizational Leadership Graduate Program at Biola University, bringing proven leadership experience to his classroom.

Connie's time in The Master's Program was beneficial to this new role, in fact, it made his calling clear: to leverage his experience and skills into an environment to influence future leaders of the marketplace. The Master's Program not only helped him tune into his current role in kingdom, it also helped him define what it means to be an authentic follower of Jesus.

Although his company was recently acquired, he continues to be fully engaged in his profession. In addition, he is challenging others, preparing for the marketplace, to think from a Christian perspective. He is able to use his classroom as a place to look at the business industry academically, with a lens of 30 years in the field. And he is able to mentor future leaders in their fields.

Connie entered The Master's Program as a proven leader in his unique environment, but he was unclear about how that could translate into his unique, personal Kingdom Calling. Just a few years after graduating from the program, Connie is living out his calling. He hasn't retired from business in order to make a difference for the Kingdom... this revolutionary is able to leverage his current marketplace success and experience in order to teach and influence future leaders!

Connie and his wife, Pat, reside in Huntington Beach, Ca. and are active members at the First Baptist Church of Huntington Beach/Fountain Valley.
